

Harper College Transfer Planning Guide

Associate in Arts – Secondary Education Sample Plan

Transfer & Career Notes

All states require public school teachers to be certified. Certification requirements vary by state, although generally they include a bachelor's degree from a four-year program and completion of an approved teacher education program. Almost all states require applicants for certification to be tested for competency in basic skills, teaching skills, or subject matter. At most institutions students major in the subject they wish to teach along with taking their education certification coursework.

Admission requirements to schools of education are often higher than admission requirements to the university itself.

Prior to and during student teaching, students should have a variety of involvements with children and youth. Some of these experiences may be built into class time; others will need to be done by the student's initiative. Most teacher education programs require a student to have a minimum of 100 hours in laboratory and clinical experience before entering student teaching. Some schools will accept Harper's EDU 202 to satisfy part of this clinical experience requirement.
